Work has started on an industrial development in Wacol, south-west Brisbane. The project is set to deliver up to 10,000 jobs and attract multi national companies.

Graham Quirk, Brisbane Lord Mayor says the jobs this site will create during the course of the development and ongoing. The workforce will also have all the facilities which are required. 60 years ago it was known as Camp Columbia and housed US troops.

The development will preserve almost 20,000 hectares of bushland. Metroplex Construction says tenants will be able to move in next year.
